Lodi

209-369-8255 FX 368-0600

You build on a foundation. So do we.

Construction takes ordered teamwork. We understand you've got a schedule to stick to, and that's why we're dedicated to getting you back to work as soon as possible. How do we do it? Through our careful processing of claims. No one else has our track record of uninterrupted service. It's our foundation.

Together, we'll help keep California working.

Capitol Connection Q&A for Contractors

Week of 12/15/14

By Shauna Krause of Capitol Services, Inc.

Will the California State Contractor's Board go 'dark' next year? It all depends on the Legislature's decision based on the 'highlights' of accomplishments for contractors and consumers in California... In November, the CSLB delivered its "Sunset Review Report" to the State Legislature and Governor. Most Consumer Boards and Commissions have a "sunset" date (currently January 1, 2016 for the CSLB), whereby they would cease to exist (i.e. sunset) unless the State Legislature extends their date of operation. As part of this process, these Boards go through a periodic review and produce a comprehensive report on where they've been, where they are currently and where they hope to be (or anticipate) going in the upcoming years. Basically, it is a report justifying the continuation of the Contractors Board.

Among the Board's many stated accomplishments highlighted within this 346 page report are:

- 1) Veterans Assistance where the CSLB offers a Veterans Application Assistance Program for troops transitioning from military service to civilian employment.
- 2) Sponsored legislation requiring Workers' Compensation Recertification to help prevent under-reporting of employees when securing workers' compensation insurance. An active licensee with an exemption from workers' compensation insurance must either recertify the exemption or provide a current and valid Certificate of Insurance at the time of renewal.
- 3) Established a Complaint Disclosure Program with Partnering Government Agencies whereby the CSLB will disclose on its website any disciplinary action against contractors by partner state agencies.
- 4) Implemented an Underground Economy Program to take timely disciplinary action against contractors found during the mediation process to be participating in the underground economy.
- 5) To increase Building Permit Compliance, the CSLB developed a complaint form with input from building officials, industry groups, and other partner agencies so anyone with knowledge of a construction site that lacks a building permit can use the online form to file a complaint with board.
- 6) The CSLB's Statewide Investigative Fraud Team (SWIFT) began partnering with state and local government agencies in 19 different counties as part of its District Attorney Office Partnership for License and WC Violations. For those contractors playing by the rules, these programs should be welcome.

The CSLB report also urges the Legislature and Administration to "support efforts to modernize and streamline laws and regulations related to contracting in California to help ease complicated requirements for contractors and confusing language that prevents consumers from making informed choices." This includes a statement regarding how the application of B&P Code Section 7031(b) by the legal profession (including the courts) is overly broad. As an example, "If there is a break in licensure, even for one day, attorneys representing public agencies, prime contractors, commercial and/or industrial project owners, and consumers use the lapse as the basis to seek recovery of all compensation paid on a project, as though the contractor had been "unlicensed" for the entire term of the contract". The same "unlicensed" interpretation is being applied to cases where a contractor has maintained a valid license in a classification for which the license was issued but, during the course of construction, performed a small amount of work that may later be deemed to have been "out-of-class". Significantly, the terms "duly licensed" (as used in subdivision (a) and "unlicensed" (as used in subdivision (b) are not defined in the Contractors' State License Law, but are decisive terms under Section 7031. The Report goes on to say, the application of this statute in this manner may facilitate "unjust enrichment" to public agencies, prime contractors, and/or commercial/industrial project owners, which is an "unacceptable outcome within the spirit of the law."

While knowledge is power, knowing where to go for the answers is half the battle. Get expert assistance immediately when you call 866-443-0657, email info@cutredtape.com, or write us at Capitol Services, Inc., 1225 8th St. Ste. 500, Sacramento, CA 95814. Research past columns at www.cutredtape.com

Falling Objects

Objects falling from above and striking people below have caused serious industrial injuries and account for a number of fatalities every year. Although the exact number of “falling object” injuries is difficult to determine, documents produced in several recent court cases suggest that the practice of “high stacking” materials and supplies poses a serious safety threat to those below.

Provide Adequate Warning - Workers or customers below depend on those working above for their safety. If you’re going to be doing work overhead, warn those in the area either verbally or with signs, ropes or barricades. For those below, it’s their responsibility to be aware of the work being done overhead and observe the warnings and barricades.

Secure The Load - If you’ll be lifting a load to a higher level, make sure the load is balanced and secured so it won’t slip off. Restraints such as nylon strapping bands can be used to secure overhead goods. In some cases, merchandise to be stacked on top of racks can be shrink-wrapped in plastic to provide stability and keep loose boxes and other items from falling. If using plastic wrap remember that the plastic may stretch due to the high heat at the top of the racks and may cause the load to shift. Another safety precaution is to provide netting on stored items or restraining bars to keep the load in place. If you’re placing a load on a scaffold or platform, make sure there are guard rails or toe boards to prevent material from fall off.

Moving A Load - Never lift, lower or swing a load over anyone’s head! Block off areas where loads are being lifted or lowered. Have a “spotter” in the adjoining aisle where items might be pushed off racks or platforms during moving or stacking of materials. If possible, restrict these stacking and heavy moving operations to hours when fewer people are present.

Practice Good Housekeeping - Keep tools and other materials away from edges and off of railings or sills. Stack them on a flat surface; crosstie or cover them, if necessary, to keep them in place. If you’re working overhead, watch that you don’t kick, throw or sweep material off that could fall on anyone below.

Whenever there’s a risk of falling objects at a worksite, an employer is required to provide protection for workers and visitors to the site. Hard hats and safety shoes are examples of personal protection against falling objects.

The above evaluations and/or recommendations are for general guidance only and should not be relied upon for legal compliance purposes. They are based solely on the information provided to us and relate only to those conditions specifically discussed. We do not make any warranty, expressed or implied, that your workplace is safe or healthful or that it complies with all laws, regulations or standards.
